

Ways to Save

Money saved is money earned and these money-saving tips work in tight times.

Avoid It

“This could have been an e-mail” is said about many a meeting. Avoiding a business lunch or not traveling to meet someone face to face (when a Zoom call will do) saves time and money.

Just Do It

I get it, time is money and hiring help is often easier, but by fixing, cleaning, and growing things myself I'm able to save hundreds of dollars—and it feels good.

Pause It

Pause memberships you're not using and turn off notifications from vendors with their tempting and hard-to-resist offers.

Borrow It

The next best thing to having that rare and random tool you need is having a neighbor or friend who does. Or, rent it for the day.

Create It

It all started with the kids and I creating our own greeting cards. Since, we've expanded to making personalized gifts for family and friends.

The goal is to get what you want (the good stuff) for less than what it's offered. Don't be afraid to ask for a deal or any specials that may not be advertised.

Share It

Pooling funds to buy or rent a big-ticket item makes it more affordable. Family plans for services saves money, too.

Stop It

No judgement, but if we could give up or cut back on a bad habit we can save some money and maybe save ourselves.

Clip It

The savings using digital coupons at the grocery store and reward programs for other purchases funds our travel.

Lee Silber

Lee is a popular presenter, award-winning author, podcast host, and business owner. www.leesilber.com.

